

Dear Sirs,

I'm sure you hear this constantly, but it seems to fall on deaf ears - both Democrats and Republicans.

I love the state of Connecticut, and it breaks my heart to see all my friends leaving because of the high cost of living, and lack of decent jobs. I believe a lot of this is because we impose high taxes on those that can keep the state prosperous so that we can give to those that cannot afford it. Example: I work for a non profit business. I recently got a call from a woman who was in her car with her autistic child, left Florida because there weren't any services, and kept on driving through each state until she found one that could give her free services for her child...she does not have a job. Needless to say, she settled in Connecticut. As much as I feel for these people, we need to take care of our own problems, and other states need to take care of their problems. I get similar calls weekly. Who is going to pay for all these free services when the rest of us tax paying citizens move out? This is a serious problem that is not being addressed.

There is a lot of talking by politicians in CT, but no solutions to the problem - we just keep giving it all away.

Where are the good jobs that will keep our youth here? What is the incentive to retiring in this state?

Don't know why I am wasting my time writing, nothing ever gets done in this state.

P. Capo
